MISSION

As world economies continue to shift and change in response to global financial situations, job markets have begun to demand a more highly-skilled workforce. In many industries a college degree is the minimum requirement and further educational development is expected to advance. With these current trends in mind, the Advances in Higher Education & Professional Development (AHEPD) Book Series provides an outlet for researchers and academics to publish their research in these areas and to distribute these works to practitioners and other researchers.

AHEPD encompasses all research dealing with higher education pedagogy, development, and curriculum design, as well as all areas of professional development, regardless of focus.

COVERAGE

- Adult Education
- Assessment in Higher Education
- Career Training
- Coaching and Mentoring
- Continuing Professional Development
- Governance in Higher Education

Chapter 1

Culturally Responsive Relationships Focused Pedagogies: The Key to Quality Teaching and Creating Quality Learning Environments	1
--	---

Catherine Maree Burgess, University of Sydney, Australia

John Robert Evans, University of Technology Sydney, Australia

This chapter examines the importance of culturally responsive relationships-focused pedagogical approaches in engaging Aboriginal students in their learning and the significance of this to improving their educational outcomes. Significantly, the themes and issues raised in this chapter reflect much of the international literature on Indigenous, minority and marginalized students.

Chapter 2

Global Education Professional Development: A Model for Cross-Cultural Competence	32
--	----

Ellen Yeh, Columbia College Chicago, USA

Monika Jaiswal-Oliver, Columbia College Chicago, USA

Gigi Posejpal, Columbia College Chicago, USA

This chapter examines a model to help educators, administrators, and policy makers to (1) comprehend current policies, practices, experiences as well as strategies in global classrooms; (2) understand how instructors can help ESL learners adjust to the U.S. academic language and culture and how this support could affect learners' effectiveness, attitudes and confidence; and (3) acquire the knowledge of how to integrate technology into the curriculum and consider technology as meaningful learning environments that could support not only language but also intercultural and global literacy skills (framed within a social constructivist stance that examines the nature of dialogic meaning making and hybrid teaching) presents a reflective case study of a specific instance of hybrid teaching with preservice teachers in a graduate course on the languages and literacies of bilingual elementary children.

Chapter 3

Preparing Teacher Candidates for Diverse Classrooms: The Role of Teacher Preparation Programs . 52
Judi Simmons Estes, Park University, USA

This chapter suggests that teacher preparation programs, regardless of geographic location and demographics of their teacher candidates, model a spirit of inclusivity and be intentional in offering an integrated approach to preparing teacher candidates to be highly-effective in working with all students regardless of diversity represented.

Chapter 4

Cultural Self-Study as a Tool for Critical Reflection and Learning: Integral Analysis and Implications for Pre-Service Teacher Education Programs 76
Natalie J. Pitre, Queen's University, Canada
Veronika Bohac Clarke, University of Calgary, Canada

This chapter examines a research study based on the Cultural Self-Study method with a specific example used to illustrate how the tool and its application look in real life, and the recommendations for the use of self-study in pre-service teacher training.

Chapter 5

Demographic Imperativeness: Critical Issues in Preparing Minority Teacher Candidates in Teacher Education..... 101
Amy Yun-Ping Chen, Saint Louis University, USA

This chapter examines the demand, struggle, and recruitment of minority teacher candidates in teacher education. The main goals of this chapter are to: (1) survey the impact of teacher demographics on student learning processes and academic achievements; (2) identify the promise and pitfalls of diversifying teacher candidates in preparation programs; and (3) provide a scholarly basis for future developments.

Chapter 6

Teacher Education and Digital Equity: Research in the Millennium..... 120
Anita Rao Mysore, Indus Training & Research Institute, India

This chapter examines both conceptual and empirical reviews and studies conducted in this millennium to bring about digital equity. This chapter informs teacher education programs, researchers, school administrators, policymakers, teachers, and other stakeholders about evidences and recommendations to bring about digital equity in US K-12 and teacher education.

Chapter 7

Exploring Technology Through Issues of Social Justice 137
Courtney K. Clausen, University of Northern Iowa, USA

This chapter explores technology through issues of social justice. The research question guiding this project was: How does the integration of cultural competencies and culturally responsive teaching impact student learning in the secondary classroom? This chapter examines pedagogy and practice highlighting the integration of culturally relevant pedagogy and cultural relevant teaching into a computer science course focused on current events and issues of social justice.

Chapter 8

We Drank the Cola in Collaboration: Voices of Haitian Teachers in Haiti 159

Sarah Q. Coupet, Educational Consultant, USA

Guerda Nicolas, University of Miami, USA

This chapter discusses the notion of developing high quality teachers in the light of education reform using a Case Study of teachers in Haiti. This chapter validates previous research that suggests that high quality in-service teacher professional development leads to improved instruction, student learning, and ultimately promotes social equity.

Chapter 9

This Is How I Learn: Co-Creating Space for Students' Voices 178

Jessica H. Burbach, Portland YouthBuilders, USA

Staci B. Martin, Portland State University, USA

Javonta Arnold-Fowlkes, Portland YouthBuilders, USA

Johnathan Sakaith, Portland YouthBuilders, USA

Cheyenne Julius, Portland YouthBuilders, USA

Andrew Hibbs, Portland YouthBuilders, USA

This chapter presents research on how Culturally Responsive Mathematics Teaching (CRMT) and a critical hope framework can be used as learning tools in the alternative high school classroom. The study shows how 12 high school students and two teachers, one in high school and one in post-secondary, can work together to nurture students' personal and collective identity, agency, and hope. The chapter utilizes the concept of the "six words" from the Race Card Project to co-create spaces that question the dominant narrative, which describes students as dropouts, and that offer spaces of hope and solidarity.

Chapter 10

Developing Equity Literacy through Diverse Literature for Children and Young Adults 193

Suzanne Fondrie, University of Wisconsin – Oshkosh, USA

Marguerite Penick-Parks, University of Wisconsin – Oshkosh, USA

Omobolade Delano-Oriaran, St. Norbert College, USA

This chapter highlights the application of the equity literacy framework as a curricular approach to infusing diverse and multiple perspectives in PK-12 school curriculum, and presents a rationale for developing equity literacy in PK-12 students. It provides texts and related teaching ideas appropriate for supporting that development.

Chapter 11

Calling In, Not Calling Out: A Critical Race Framework for Nurturing Cross-Cultural Alliances
in Teacher Candidates 217

Anita Bright, Portland State University, USA

James Gambrell, Portland State University, USA

This chapter engages educators in considering how the key ideas in Critical Race Theory may be applicable in their own settings. The authors explain ways to define, identify, and disrupt microaggressions, and explore ways to serve as empathetic allies to marginalized students, families, and teachers. This chapter includes vignettes that highlight the processes of calling in and being called in as a means to work towards greater equity and reduced oppression in educational and social settings.

Chapter 12

“I Don’t See Color, I Grade on Content”: An Approach to Addressing Embodied Microaggressive Behaviors in Preservice Teacher Programs..... 236

Anika Spratley Burtin, University of the District of Columbia, USA

Pamela Hampton-Garland, University of the District of Columbia, USA

Nathalie Mizelle-Johnson, University of the District of Columbia, USA

This chapter explores the development and subconscious expressions of microaggressive behaviors and language that are embodied throughout life. This chapter also provides strategies for teacher educators to build upon the framework of “care” that often underlies teacher candidates’ desire to enter the profession in order to help them recognize and deal with embodied values that result in microaggressive acts in the classroom.

Chapter 13

Disposition and Early Childhood Education Preservice Teachers: A Social Justice Stance 253

Ursula Thomas, Georgia State University-Perimeter College, USA

This chapter examines the development of social justice dispositions in early childhood preservice teachers. This chapter elicits a critical debate to help teacher educators explore areas of the early childhood program that need revisions to equip relevant preservice teachers with multiple opportunities and field placement.

Chapter 14

Bridging the L1-L2 Divide: Learner-Centered Instruction in the Heritage/L2 Spanish Classroom .. 270

Bridget M. Morgan, Indiana University South Bend, USA

This chapter engages the reality of the university classroom that includes Heritage-Learners (HL) and second-language learners (L2) of Spanish. Rather than furthering the “what if” considerations of the idealized heritage learner in a quasi-homogenous group and specialized course track, the author focuses on the very pressing question of ways in which HL and L2 populations face similar learning challenges in an intermediate-level Spanish writing course. Drawing on research about learner-centered and HL and L2 language-learning pedagogies, the author discusses how implementation of progressive assignment design and targeted learning skills development supported L2 students and transitional bilinguals in the mixed classroom. Finally, the limits of this mixed classroom model for HL and L2 learners are discussed.

Chapter 15

Developing Resilience through Experiences: El Camino Al Exito 287

Jennifer L. Penland, Sul Ross State University, USA

The principal focus of this chapter is resiliency theory, as an expanding ideology attempting to provide supportive resources with suggestions for how education practitioners might function, as positive social change agents in organizations and institutions. Elemental to current transformational and remedial trends under construction in organizations and institutions, education practitioners are increasingly responsible for distressed student populations. Scholars from various disciplines have contributed to the current state of this ideological reformulation, titled resiliency theory, while research investigations presently continue to unfold and develop. Data were gathered electronically from First Year Seminar instructors during the 2015 school year from faculty questionnaires with eight questions focusing on the following areas: engaging topics, successful instructional strategies and benefits of FYS courses. Findings suggested: 1) research with teacher knowledge gives her the insight needed to help teachers adopt age appropriate strategies that are culturally relevant. She is currently the Director of Field Experience and Assessment for Education at Georgia State University-Perimeter College. Her research interests include diversity, social justice, culturally relevant pedagogy, cultural mediation, multicultural education, gender issues in curriculum and teaching, service learning, technology and leadership. She earned a bachelor's degree of science in early childhood education at Alabama State University, a master's degree of science in early childhood education at Auburn University-Montgomery, and a Doctorate of Education at The University of Alabama.

Ellen Yeh holds a Ph.D. in Curriculum and Instruction with a specialization in second language education from Ohio University. She currently serves as a director and lecturer of English as an Additional Language Program at English Department in Columbia College. Her research interests include media literacy education, Computer Assisted Language Learning (CALL) instruction design, intercultural studies, teacher education and the education of diverse populations. She has taught in ESL institutes in Taiwan and the United States. She was a coordinator in the Helen M. Robison Center for Reading, where she was responsible for designing tutor-training sessions and assisting the coordination of the center. She has written a book chapter titled "Enhancing linguistic and intercultural competencies through the use of social network sites and Google Earth" and published a research article that is entitled "Teaching culture and language through the multiple intelligences film teaching model in the ESL/EFL classroom."
